

Library Cancels Some Journals and Serials after Spring Review

While the library was not part of the general university cutbacks for 2009/10, and in fact the library is slated for a budget increase of $300,000 additional dollars for the year, some publications were cancelled after the spring review.

Inflation for library materials is a major driver of library cancellations across the country. The University Libraries canceled more than $200,000 worth of journal and serial subscriptions after reviewing its title list with the university community in spring 2009.

As the table indicates, for several years the costs for journals and serials in every discipline have increased at an annual rate significantly greater than the Consumer Price Index. While library support funds have also increased over the same period, the funding increments were not sufficient to sustain the entire list of the library publications. The funds for this year will allow us to meet inflationary costs and to make modest investments in new materials that have one-time rather than continuing costs. Many libraries review serials annually to make sure that the mix of titles continues to reflect the best use of the funds available. In 2009/10 we will begin this practice.

A number of the cancelled titles will continue to be accessible in online databases like ABI/Inform or Ebscohost, as long as those host databases do not remove the title. Past practice tells us that most useful and used titles have been very stable in the databases. The number of such titles that are deleted annually is small.

Some book or annual formats which were previously ordered comprehensively and on a continuing basis – e.g., Advances in Parasitology or Advances in Health Economics and Health Services, may be ordered as a specific volume is needed.

Access for some titles will be available through use of the ILLiad system for interlibrary loan. Interloan access works very well for those less frequently used titles which we can obtain from our network partners. When the fair use guidelines are exceeded (five items per year from a publication) the library pays a fee to the Copyright Clearance Center for each subsequent item. If interloans are not available free from partners, we work with other libraries, many of whom charge for the materials we will get for our users. So interlibrary loan is very good for many things needed by the university community, but it also must be budgeted for.

A list of titles is attached. Should you have any questions about the review or specific titles please contact Edward Lener, Associate Director for Collection Management (lener@vt.edu) or Leslie O'Brien, Director for Collection Management and Technical Services. (lobrien@vt.edu)

I appreciate your active participation in the review process that was carried out this spring. It was very helpful in identifying the needs of the community.

Eileen E. Hitchingham
Dean, University Libraries

Titles cancelled as subscriptions or standing orders after spring 2009 Review

* With an item means electronic access will be available on an aggregator database to which we subscribe, or as an open access free journal. The VT subscription will not be continued. The continuation of the title on the database, or as a free open access title is not guaranteed
